PRESS RELEASE

For immediate release

UNITED BY LEARNING WEBSITE GOES LIVE

Education organisation United by Learning launches its brand new full-version website which caters for English Language teachers and the wider school community.

Visitors to the website can find information on a range of services on offer which include ELT training, webinars, international exam preparation, curriculum planning, English language programmes and more.

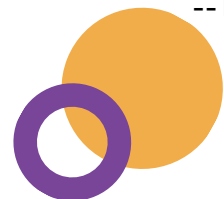

The website's fresh and dynamic design reflects the ethos of the organisation which is to empower teachers with exciting ideas and approaches to diversify their teaching. "We want every single educator and organisation partnering with us to feel inspired by a community of like-minded people who place the learner at the very centre of what they do," says CEO James Freeman.

Through his years working in the ELT sector as an English teacher, education manager, speaking examiner and trainer – James has received glowing endorsements from schools, universities, publishers and distribution companies all of which can be seen on the website.

As part of the new launch, United by Learning is giving away a concise free guide to online teaching to every person who subscribes to the mailing list during the month of July 2020.

James concludes: "The website is not only a place where you can find information about United by Learning, but teachers will also discover a supportive resources section where they can download for free accompanying materials to our different webinars and events that we will be having."
